Second District—O. F. NOWLAN, of Janesville.
Third District—JOHN CONLEY, of Clinton.

The Republican ticket of which is one of the best ever nominated by the Republicans of Wisconsin, will be elected tomorrow. The gentlemen placed thereon are men who have been tried in public life, and there is not a single one who has had to apologize for his record. General Rusk, the candidate for Governor, is one of the best known men in the State. His rise from obscurity to a prominent place in our State and National politics, has been as honorable and deserved as it has been rapid. Whether in the army, in the legislature, or in the State, or whether in Congress, he was the same true, unswerving man, and faithful public servant, and making a record that his most bitter enemies could not impeach. He has never yet proved a failure in any position he has been placed, and he has been thoroughly tried, and in all cases has been beyond the touch of scandal. He is not only popular with the masses, but he is immensely popular with the soldiers, from whom he will receive almost a solid support.

There will be eleven State elections tomorrow—Colorado, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and Wisconsin.

Captain E. G. Timme, candidate for Secretary of State, is one of the truest men that ever carried a sword or held a public position. He is one of those men who challenges the respect of everybody. The people of Kenosha have tried him year after year, and the better he is known and the more he is tried, the stronger he becomes, and the more substantial his popularity. He will receive a large majority, and the public may rest assured that he will make one of the most faithful and competent officers that ever filled the office of Secretary of State.

The intelligent—the real temperance people of Wisconsin—will hardly be misled by so transparent a device to elect the Democratic ticket, as that of supporting Mr. Kanouse for Governor.

For Lieutenant Governor the Republicans will vote for that pioneer, Sam. S. Fifield, of Ashland. He is not only popular, but he is capable of filling the office admirably, having been thoroughly tried as a presiding officer while he was Speaker of the Assembly.

The difference between now and then in Mr. Kanouse's opinion of prohibition is very striking. Until he was offered the nomination for Governor on the Prohibition ticket, he was strongly opposed to prohibition. On this point the Milwaukee Republican and News says: "He has always opposed prohibition in Wisconsin. It may be safely affirmed that he does not believe in the present prohibition movement. For ten years or more Mr. Kanouse has been supported by a salary as the head of the Good Templars, and during this time he has been able to keep down the prohibition issue. This year, however, he seems to have been outwitted and as a salaried officer of the organization he was discreet enough to accept the situation as he found it. If he had refused to lead, some other man would have secured his position and his salary as the head of the organization." This accounts for the milk in the coconut.

Mr. Robert Graham, is so worthy a man, and is held in so high esteem as an educator, that he is on three tickets. He is a Republican, and the Democrats and the Prohibitionists have endorsed him.

As a plea for Republican votes, the Democratic circular says "the city charter is to be revised, and the question is shall we employ the best of counsel at the city's expense, or shall we let the State pay him as an Assemblyman?" Inasmuch as the Assemblyman has nothing to do with revising the city charter, the taxpayers will answer for themselves, and elect Mr. Nowlan. Mr. Winans can't run in on this dodge.

The Hon. Edward C. McFetridge, the Republican candidate for State Treasurer, is one of the best business men in the State—honest, enterprising, popular, and successful. Probably there is no man in the State who enjoys a wider popularity than Mr. McFetridge. He lives in a rank Democratic county where Democrats grow up like weeds, and although he had always been a staunch Republican, he has been elected to the State Senate by handsome majorities. He is a solid man both in integrity and in business.

The Democratic Assembly ticket not being able to stand upon its own merits in a square open-handed contest, is compelled to go begging for Republican votes. But the Republicans can't be induced into contributing to the Democratic scheme.

Judge Leander F. Frisby, of Washington County, the Republican candidate for Attorney General, is an excellent lawyer, and a gentleman of superior ability. He lives in a strong Democratic county, but he is so thoroughly known there that he has carried it several times, and purely through a popularity that comes of a high personal probity, a spotless record, and an integrity that is unflinching.

That Democratic circular to Republican voters, says "Republicans are cordially informed that the Democrats have not put him (Mr. Winans) in nomination to be knocked down." We predict that the Democrats have misinformed the Republicans. No Republican wishes to knock down any Democratic candidate in the literal sense of that term, but Mr. Nowlan will be elected all the same.

Of course Mr. Nowlan is popular, but then he is a competent man for the Assembly, and for these reasons no Democratic circular can defeat him.

The Hon. Nils P. Haugen, of Pierce county, the Republican candidate for Railway Commissioner, was a member of the Assembly in 1879 and 1880. He is an energetic, careful man, of excellent reputation. He is a Norwegian of great ability, and is very popular with his own countrymen. All efforts at creating ill feeling among Norwegians against the Republicans has proved a sad failure. He will fill the office well, and thereby honor the party that elected him, and prove a worthy representative of the nationality to which he belongs.

Mr. Nowlan is going in on his merits, and won't have to beg for votes. This is the advantage that he has over the Democratic nominee.

The Democrats in the city are in a bad way. They know that there is not power enough in the Democratic party in the city to elect Mr. Winans, and unless they can steal some Republican votes, their candidate will be beaten. In order to save him from defeat, if possible, they have issued a private circular, and mailed it to certain Republicans. They have also caused to be printed a Republican ticket with the name of Mr. Winans for the Assembly, and one of these fraudulent tickets is mailed with the circular.

This is an old trick and unblushing cheek, but it is an on a par with the general make-up of Democratic leaders. The circular says there is no United States Senator to elect, and no restriction of the State, it is simply to vote for the best man. The experience of last winter proves that the Republican party must always be ready with its majority in the Legislature, and that there is no telling when there will be a vacancy in the Senate. It will never do to barter away a Republican majority, nor yield a single point of advantage to the Democrats. In times like this every Republican should remain true, and especially when his party has the best man for office. Do not be deceived by this artful dodge. Stand by your colors and vote for the best man—Oscar F. Nowlan.

It is at last decided that William Kuhl is not an lost Williams.

It is always a good thing for the State in point of economy and excellent management of State affairs, to have a Republican Legislature. Therefore let there be a solid Republican vote for Oscar F. Nowlan.

About Mr. Spooner, Jr., the candidate for Insurance Commissioner, the State Journal says: "Hon. Phil. L. Spooner, the Republican candidate for Insurance Commissioner, is the friend of everybody and everybody's friend. His capacity for the position to which his friends desire to elect him, is so thoroughly known and appreciated by the people of the State that he will receive thousands of votes from his political opponents and those of every Republican."

The Democratic circular, which begs for Republican votes, says the issue is "simply to vote for the best man." Then vote for Oscar F. Nowlan. On that issue the Republicans will win.

Ex-Senator Howe says that climbing the hills in Colorado has cured him of the asthma.

The citizens of New York city do not, in any considerable number, propose to pay $10 a seat to hear Patti sing. This is a timely rebuke to exorbitant prices.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR.

He Has a Conference with Secretary Blaine.

New York, Nov. 6.—President Arthur remained in his house to-day, and was called upon by many well known gentlemen, including General Grant, General Horace Porter, John Rauch, Richard Grant White, and Roger A. Pryor. In the evening the President had a conference with Secretary Blaine in the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

THE CABINET SCENE.

President Arthur Refuses to Talk.
New York, Nov. 6.—A reporter who saw President Arthur this evening at his house, 123 Lexington avenue, asked as to the truth of the alleged scene in the cabinet with Attorney General Mac Veagh over the Guiteau trial. The President said he had not read the article of the Washington Star and would prefer not to be interviewed. Colonel George Bliss said:

"I have read the article to which you allude. I have not seen President Arthur to-day, and know nothing about the matter. I think, however, it is a fabrication, for the meetings of the cabinet are secret, and what takes place in them is rarely revealed. When a person undertakes to give a full account of what transpires, you may rest assured that it is untrue. The story is one which cannot be officially contradicted, for to contradict it would give it status."

MURDER AND SUICIDE.
A Terrible Tragedy Committed by a Low, Drunken Brute in Iowa City.

Iowa City, Iowa, Nov. 5.—A horrible tragedy occurred in this city this morning, and to make a little more complete report of the affair, we give a few antecedent facts, which we have obtained to-day. Three or four years ago a daughter of a shoemaker of this city named Hess, a man well known and respected by his neighbors and customers, married a wealthy saloon-keeper of Cedar Rapids, by whom she had two children. He died about two years ago, leaving her a fortune of about $20,000. A little over a year ago she married again, in Cedar Rapids, a man named Anton Stein, a Polish Jew, and soon after their marriage moved down to Iowa City. He engaged in saloon-keeping on Dubuque street, and it is said, kept a disreputable place, where he did considerable gambling himself.

Three months ago she separated from him, returning to her father's house, and refusing to have anything to do with him. Soon after he called one day with a carriage to take her riding, and, when she refused to go with him, attempted to force possession of her, but was frustrated. He threatened to do violence to her, and, indeed, it is thought this proposed pleasure trip was only a ruse to get her in his power and kill her.

In September she sued for a divorce, which was granted her yesterday, he, in the meanwhile, leading, gambling, and associating near to a vagrant. Yesterday he is reported as having said that if she obtained the divorce he would kill her, though no one anticipated such a terrible fulfillment of the threat as occurred to-day.

And then returning to the house, stood over the bleeding corpse, brandishing the bloody knife in one hand and a revolver in the other, and threatening to kill any one who should come in. At this point, or possibly a little previous, he took some kind of powerful poison, and in less than ten minutes he, too, was a corpse.

Never in the history of our city has there a more terrible tragedy been enacted, and it naturally is the main topic of conversation. 'Stam has been a man whom no one respected, and his wife a woman universally liked, by her acquaintances, which makes her fate the more sad.

THE ESTIMATE.

Postmaster Payne, of Milwaukee, Sanguine of Republican Success in Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 6.—Postmaster Payne, Secretary of the Republican State Central committee, is very sanguine of Republican success at the election of Tuesday. He has made careful estimates of the probable results of the election according to the Congressional districts, and claims to be supported by returns received in answer to a circular letter sent to all the counties in the State. His figures are as follows:

Districts.	Rep. Maj.	Dem. Maj.
First.....	4,820
Second.....	2,500
Third.....	2,200
Fourth.....	2,200
Fifth.....	800	2,250
Sixth.....	800
Seventh.....	6,200
Eighth.....	2,200
Total.....	10,550	2,750 or 2,750

According to these figures, Mr. Payne expects a Republican majority of from 13,300 to 13,900 in the State. He said that the news received from all parts of the State was most encouraging, not only in regard to direct Republican success, but also in regard to the vote which experienced politicians of conservative and Greenbackers. The former, Mr. Payne estimates, will not poll a heavier vote than from 5,000 to 6,000, and the Greenbackers, he thinks, will not reach more than 3,000 at the highest. Mr. Payne, in the opinion of the disunionists, is right. The idea that the disunionists in the Republican party will have any injurious or disastrous effects. He says that the utmost harmony prevails in the party, and that the only fact which may tend to lessen the Republican majorities of former campaigns will be the general apathy and indifference evinced by the people in an off-year, and this, he says, will fall equally heavy on the Democrats.

IF.
If Adam had had a game of "fifteen" placed in his hand at an early period of his existence, the whole course of history might have been materially altered for the better, and if biliousness, indigestion, sick headache or dyspepsia were unknown, SPRING BLOSSOM would not be needed. Price 50 cents, trial bottles 10 cents. Sold by A. J. Roberts and Sherer & Co.

FLOOD RECEDING.

OSHKOSH, Wis., Nov. 6.—A fall of half an inch of the water in the flooded districts since Saturday has been recorded. At a meeting of the business-men of Oshkosh, Neenah, and Menasha on Saturday a report of the special committee appointed to look into the matter of relief was presented. It recommended the removal of the cone timber of the Neenah dam, the construction of a sluiceway in the Fox River at Menasha and at each dam at Appleton and the removal of the planking on the levee of the government locks at Menasha and Appleton. The recommendations of the committee were agreed upon, and a committee was appointed to go to Appleton to make necessary preparations at that point, while another committee, with Senator Sawyer as chairman, was appointed to go to Milwaukee on Monday to consult with Colonel Huston in regard to the changes recommended to be made in the government locks. It is expected in a few days relief will be afforded to the cities of Lake Winnebago.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

That Beautiful Wretch—How We Fed the Baby—Figure Drawing—A First Greek Course.
THAT BEAUTIFUL WRETCH, A Bright Story, by William Black, author of "Maid of the Sea," etc. New York: Harper & Brothers, publishers. Chicago: Jansen, McClurg & Co. Price, cloth, $1.25.

This is William Black's latest story, and it is one of his most fascinating romances, fresh, breezy, and filled with life and motion. The heroine, Anne Beresford, is a lovely and amiable young woman, and a decidedly unassuming of the repellent title given to her by the jolly old sailor, whose favorite she is. The descriptions of scenery and life at Brighton are admirable, and the love passages charming. The story is so lovingly illustrated, and in its present form is not unworthy a place on the library table. We don't know of a novel for months which is more brilliant, fuller of clearer touches of character, or containing more life-like attitudes and conversation.

Painam's Sons, New York, have just issued a very neat and attractive little treatise on the art of figure drawing containing practical instructions for a course of study in this branch of art. It contains seventeen illustrations on wood, with full explanation how to draw them. There are a great many valuable hints in this book on the art of drawing which are valuable to the children who seek knowledge and instruction in this fascinating and useful branch of art.

Price 50 cents. For sale by Jansen, McClurg & Co., Chicago.

A PRACTICAL COURSE. by William Smith, D. C. L., L. D. Published by Harper & Brothers, New York. For sale by Jansen, McClurg & Co., Chicago, and by Janesville dealers.

This work has already won such a strong hold in the schools of the land as to demand the twelfth edition. It has been thoroughly revised, and various additions and improvements made. The practical test which has been applied to this work by its use in the classroom for years, has not only shown its merits, but has enabled the author to see clearly in what respects it could be improved, and this experience has not been in vain. Great wisdom has been shown in arranging the exercises by which the more dreary work of mastering declensions and conjugations has been happily illustrated, and practice added to theory. The type is large and clear, and the arrangement of the book is such as will prove both attractive and convenient to the student.

VISITING HOME.

To-morrow evening there will be a grand chance to visit Rome, at a trifling expenditure of time and money, and under the guidance of one who is thoroughly conversant with all the ins and outs of that city. He will illustrate his lecture by large charts and paintings, and will make it both interesting and instructive. The Minneapolis Daily Tribune says:

"The lecture was a historical and descriptive narrative of the condition of Rome, past and present, and was illustrated by numerous charts and paintings. A traveler as well as a scholar, the lecturer was able to present to his audience his personal impressions of modern Rome. He first gave an outline description of the city, illustrating his remarks with a map and a large colored bird's-eye view of Rome in crayon. He then proceeded to exhibit and describe a series of fine paintings of some of the most noted objects in the city. With the paintings the lecturer gave a great deal of information about Rome, pagan and papal, and drew an effective contrast between the old Roman life at its very culmination, and our modern progress under the inspiration of Christianity. The interesting narratives, combined with the striking paintings, made the lecture one of exceptional interest and value."

MONOTONE.

He rose and gazed upon the day.
And said, "no 'fud is dead again!"
And he went his way full of cheer.
In his heart he said, "I fear I will rain."
She watched him as he drove the road.
With listless hand to listless head.
Her breast heaved with a weary load.
And bitterly she said:
"I care not if the wind be east,
I know not if the wind be west,
I care not if I leave or tarry,
Only I wish my life had rest."

He came with the returning night.
She smiled with fond, receptive air;
His greeting was a formal slight.
In tone that never warmth would bear.
So wearily the moments sped;
So hopelessly the hours flew.
Her craving, hungry soul asked bread—
He gave her naught but husks.
She sought him with a miser's miserly.
That cannot know communion's rest.
What is the hour of day to me?
Only with my life and rest."

The seasons sped like bitter tears,
And she, the weary, waited for the dawn.
Her face, so fair in former years,
Now looked as if it were a shroud.
At last she fell, so cold before,
The old light shone on her eye.
To light, alas, no more.
He smoothed the faded hair above
The brow that had so often expressed
He gave her tokens of his love—
That could no more for her have rest.

We chide with dreary commonplace
And hearts that yearn for sympathy.
The hard lines form upon the face—
The soul forever leaves the eye.
Ah, man, envelop with golden fire!
No thousand iron rods and pile
Can change that cruel work of yours.
Her wishful, frozen smile
Who cares not if her lot be hard,
Who minds not if she work or rest,
If she but meet with kind regard,
If but her life have heartiest rest.

THE TAIL OF A KITE.

And what hung therefrom.
It was a particularly fascinating kite, to begin with. It was made of gay Japanese paper, ornamented with figures even more grotesque and characteristic than those of the "Widdy." A woman, who seemed to be dressed in a pink and blue meal-bag, with a red parasol over her head, was blowing soap-bubbles from a queer, long pipe, while three or four children—apparently put together after the fashion of jumping-jacks, and experiencing no difficulty in extending their legs at right angles with their bodies—were capering, to show their delight, and five curious animals stood on their heads, and tried to beat at mountain tops on its head, and a skyblue villa, stately as a castle, seemed on the point of falling into a yellow lake.

Roy was in a hurry to get the kite done, and he pasted the paper on the frame in a one-sided fashion, so that the figures were somewhat mixed up; but it was all right if you only looked at it rightly, which is the way with a great many things in this world. Roy thought he shouldn't mind that, and he hoped Teddy O'Brien wouldn't. The kite was for Teddy. It was "a swan." Teddy was Irish, but there was not a Yankee in Millville who could out-whistle him. He had whittled a vessel to which Roy had taken a great fancy, and which he had agreed to trade for a kite. Teddy might have made a kite of himself, which would have rivalled any in Millville, but he had broken his arm in the mill where he worked, and was not able to use it at all as yet. He had been confined to the house for more than a month, and, as he expressed it,
"the hairt was worn out of him intirely wid t'rent n'." He thought it might be a little soother to sit in the door-way after tea, and that Teddy had a weakness it was for kites.

Roy and Teddy were great friends, although Roy was the only son of the richest man in the town, the owner of the great mills, where hundreds of men and women were employed, and thousands of bales of cotton were turned into cloth, while Teddy was the oldest of the seven children of the "Widdy." O'Brien, whose chief worldly possessions were a poor little "fud" and a patch, and a pig. Then, too, Roy had plenty of time for play, having a tutor who was very indulgent in the matter of lessons; and almost every amusement that could be devised, while Teddy, who worked ten hours a day in the mill, and had no toys excepting those of his own make. Teddy was a little conceited, and to Roy, sometimes, he knew how to make a story so many things. While Roy had only things that came out of stores, and couldn't even turn a screw without making his head ache. But Roy never thought of being condescending to Teddy, because he was rich and Teddy was poor; by which you will see that Roy was an uncommonly good and sensible boy, and Teddy—well, you will soon know what kind of a boy he was.

Roy was glad that there was one thing that he could make almost as well as Teddy—doubtless that Teddy wanted a kite of his making. He would willingly have given it to him, but when Teddy offered the vessel he could not resist it, besides, Teddy would not have it otherwise; the "fud" was rather do'n' business on the square," he said.
Now it was important that this beautiful kite should have a proportionately beautiful tail. Roy was of the opinion that the glory of a kite is its tail. No newspaper nor old rags might be used in the making of this kite's tail. He knew how to get to his sister Emily's store of flannel, and she always had a great many yards of light-colored silk and gauze which would be just the things for this fine kite. Teddy might not appreciate this elegance; he was practical and wanted a "fud," above everything, but Roy wanted it to be handsome, for his own credit and satisfaction.

He found one of his sister's bonnets in a box on the shelf of a closet, and this struck him as being exactly what he wanted. It was all covered with bows of fluffy lace, and red satin ribbon, and it had long strings of lace, which he thought would make beautiful streamers for the kite.

"It's a last summer's bonnet, and I know that Emily don't want the old thing," he said to himself, as he took possession of it in a very showy manner. The bonnet, which had been a triumph of the miller's art, was degraded to the position of tail to a kite.
Roy degraded, but Roy and Teddy would both say elevated; it all depends upon whether you consider a beautiful bonnet or a beautiful kite the more important and useful thing.

It was a very fine kite, and Roy was proud and happy when he carried it to Teddy's house.

lordly roosters and matronly hens, with broods of chickens of all sizes; there was a goat, and a tame squirrel, and last, but not least, there was a parrot—a demure-looking parrot, all in drab, save for a bit of scarlet, like a knot of ribbon, at her throat; she had a very wise expression of countenance, and was a very knowing bird.

The Widow O'Brien had a fondness for animals; but she was not satisfied with her collection. She was a sensible woman, in the main, yet the more she had the more she wanted. Now she wanted a cow. And it was not an unreasonable wish. The twins, Bartholomew and Rosy, her youngest and her darlings, were weak and ailing, and goat's milk did not agree with them;
they must have cow's milk, the doctor said, and that was not easy to get in Millville unless one owned a cow.

Widow O'Brien at last determined to have a cow, and she and Teddy, together, had laid up just twenty-three dollars and sixty-seven cents toward the purchase when Teddy was brought home from the mill with his arm broken, and the doctor's bills swallowing up the savings. So Michael Dolan's now, "the head-falst" of the town, the Widow O'Brien had "iv'or put the two guys iv' her on," which he wished to sell for only fifty dollars, was as far out of her reach as the cow that jumped over the moon. And her continual bewailings had had more to do with wearing the flesh off Teddy's bones than the pain of his broken arm. For he felt himself to be the man of the family, who ought to buy a cow, instead of breaking his arm, by carelessness, and perhaps thereby causing the death of Bart and Rosy, who, his mother assured him, were dying for the want of cow's milk.

Roy felt sad to see Teddy so pale and thin, but he thought that the kite could not fail to cheer him.
Roy was his favorite at the Widow O'Brien's. Dan, the kitchen around his heels, Spitfire arched her back to be patted and smoothed, the squirrel ran up to his shoulder and perched there, and though the parrot screamed hoarsely: "Be off wid ye, ye raskill!" it was probably because no more complimentary conversation was at her command. The "Widdy" hanging over her with the view of making her a terror to the neighborhood children, who often deserved the complimentary epithet. At all events, Roy always took it as a friendly greeting on Poll's part, and Poll was certainly a very friendly creature.

She sailed down from her perch above the doorway, now, and alighted on Roy's head, regardless of the squirrel, who seemed to consider it an infringement upon his rights, and scolded hoarsely, until the kite-tail broke at intention, and Poll both regarded that with their heads on one side.

Teddy's pale face did brighten a little at the sight of that kite, and especially after he tried it. There was a good wind, and Roy had provided a very liberal allowance of string; the kite soared up, till it looked like the finest speck against the blue sky. But there was a cloud up there that was just the shape of the cow; it reminded Teddy of Michael Dolan's cow—such a bargain for fifty dollars!—which they had not the money to buy, and his heart sank as fast as the kite rose. He racked his brains for some way to obtain fifty dollars, until he forgot all about the kite, and Roy, feeling hurt that Teddy seemed to care so little for it, and was so silent, soon went home, and Teddy wound up the string and let the kite float slowly down.

Fly as high as it might, it could not fly away with his trouble, he thought.
He caught himself wishing that Michael Dolan's cow could be tied to the kite's tail, and carried up and dropped somewhere on the other side of the hills, so that his mother would never hear of her again. And while he was thinking that his mother came in at the gate, wiping her eyes on her apron.

"Oh, misha, misha! the likes o' that crathur niver was seen! Sure the milk she's after givin' do be iv'ry d'rop crane, and the butther comes iv' itself!
It's prayn' prayers on us somebody made—we do be that misfortune!"
If you were not a broken-down arm, be your own carelessness, we'd have the money ag'in' this time, and Bart and Rosy'd not be starvin' wid the hunger, nor myself heart-sick wid longin' for the cow! Oh, Teddy, it's all your fault, ye raskill!"

Teddy felt like the guiltiest rascal alive. He would have asked Michael Dolan to trust him for the cow, if he could, but he never trusted anybody, and besides, was short of money just then.
Teddy could think of no way by which "the mother" could come into possession of the "crathur" which she coveted, and he felt almost despairing enough to throw himself into the muddy little goose-pond, when, as the kite came sailing down, and out of its streamers in his face he suddenly caught sight of something glittering in their folds. He caught it hastily, but the glitter had disappeared.
Then, feeling the kite-tail carefully, he discovered a hard substance inside one of the lace bows, which Roy had fastened on just as it came from the bonnet. He drew it out. An ear-ring lay in his hand, set with a stone so many caught the light in myriads of flashing rays, and almost dazzled Teddy's eyes.
A diamond! he was sure, and he knew that diamonds were valuable.
He clutched it tightly, and his eyes sparkled.

"It might be the price of the cow!"
said he to himself. But he'd find out, he thought, before telling his mother what he had found; he would not raise her hopes only to have them disappointed.

The village came in sight, and a few rods more would bring him to the jeweler's shop, he was forced to sit down and rest. As he sat there a voice came, whether from the heavens above, or the earth beneath, Teddy could not tell—a voice which cried, solemnly: "Go home wid ye, ye raskill!"

It was one of Poll's remarks, but Teddy thought the voice much more solemn than Poll's, and with emphasis there was on the word "thafe!" It made Teddy blush, guiltily, while he looked about to discover whence the voice came. It could not possibly be his conscience that spoke so loud!

It came again—this time muffled and distant, but however, more dreadful!
"Go home wid ye! Go home wid ye!
ye thafe iv' the wurruld!"

"I'm go'n! I'm go'n!" whoever ye are!" said Teddy, getting onto his feet, with his face turned homeward, though he trembled so that he could hardly stand. "It's a thafe I was ma'nin' to be—the saints forgive me—but I niver will be niver! An' will ye kape quiet now, ye scrahe-owl!" This latter clause Teddy muttered rather angrily, for his courage had risen with his resolution to be honest.

"Go home wid ye! Go home wid ye!" cried the voice, in answer. This time it was a shrill cackle, exactly like Poll's, but the offensive word "thafe!"
was considerably left out.
Teddy looked up, and down, and all around, and then he pinched himself to see if he really were Teddy. "That bird goes to the mill," he thought, as the body always "sings!" And Teddy crossed himself as a protection against witches.

Something pinched his fingers sharply, and, looking down, he saw, sticking out of his coat-pocket, Poll's sleek, gray head!

Teddy felt a little ashamed that he had been so frightened, and a little angry with Poll; but, down deep in his heart, he was more ashamed of what he had been going to do, and thankful to Poll for having saved him from it.
He scolded her at first, but he ended by patting her, and Poll cocked her head first on one side and then on the other, and if ever a parrot laughed with real enjoyment, Poll was that parrot!

Although he was so tired, Teddy quickly made his way to Roy's house.
He did not even dare to think of Michael Dolan's cow, lest he should yield again to temptation.

He gave the ear-ring to Roy, and told him that he had found it fastened to the tail of the kite.

"Oh, that's Emily's diamond earring, that she lost last summer, and which she was afraid to tell about!"
"We hunted everywhere, and at last papa offered fifty dollars reward for it—they are big diamonds, and cost an awful lot, and Emily felt so bad. It must have caught in her bonnet-strings, and inside the bow, so she never saw it.
Emily will be awfully glad, and it's lucky for you, Teddy, for I'll get papa to give you the fifty dollars right away!"

But when Roy's father appeared, Teddy confessed, with shame, how near he had come to stealing the ear-rings, and he would not take the fifty dollars.
Yet, when he was urged, how could he resist? It was just the price of Michael Dolan's cow!

The Widow O'Brien sought far and near for Teddy, who had never been outside the gate since he had broken his arm, and she wept and wrung her hands, feeling that her reproaches had driven him to some desperate deed. She called upon all the neighbors to witness that there was not an "aquil" of Teddy "for a decent, honest boy, in North Ameriky," and that she "had kilt him and broken the hair iv' him intirely wid her rapid and cruel tongue."
And making preparations to have the muddy little goose-pond dragged, when Teddy appeared, driving home in triumph Michael Dolan's cow.

Teddy's bright visions were more than realized. Bart and Rosy grew so fat that the little "Japs" on the kite looked actually thin by comparison, and the butter that his mother made was the wonder and delight of the whole town.

And the satisfaction of Widow O'Brien was beyond the power of words to express.

But, after all, Teddy's great and lasting satisfaction seemed to be that he was not a "thafe."

"I'd be glad I didn't stafe it if I didn't get the cow at all, at all!" he said to himself, very often.

And Poll were greater friends than ever.

The Widow O'Brien says: "This is a quare wurruld, and ye niver know what'll happen, since Teddy is 'thor findin' the finest cow in the country hangin' to the tail iv' a kite!"—Sophie Speed, in St. Nicholas.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.
The following statement of William J.
Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. "In the fall of 1876, I was taken with a violent bleeding of the lungs, followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed.
In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital, and while there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half-dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines.
I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of Dr. Wm.
Hall's Balsam for the Lungs. I bought a bottle of my friend's advice, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle
to satisfy them, when, to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.
"I write this hoping you will publish
it, so that every one afflicted with Dr.
Coughlin's Lung will be induced to take
DR. Wm. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS.
I have been cured, and I can testify that
my case was incurable, but I got a bottle

"I write this hoping you will publish
it, so that every one afflicted with Dr.
Coughlin's Lung will be induced to take
DR. Wm. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS.
I have been cured, and I can testify that
my case was incurable, but I got a bottle
to satisfy them, when, to my surprise and
gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to
its than I have the past three years.

Mother's! Mother's! Mother's!!! Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere 25 cents a bottle. marked—mon-wed-sat—33c

BRIEFLETS.
—Prepare your ballots.
—Let the Republican stay away from the polls to-morrow.

—Yesterday was very favorable for the showing up of new bonnets at church.

—The young folk of the Congregational church have a social this evening at the residence of Mrs. Shelton.

—R. J. Rooney's father caught his foot in the wheel as he was driving along a speedy horse, Saturday evening. He escaped with a bad sprain.

—There will be a meeting of the Republican club at Bennett & Sale's office this evening at 7:30 o'clock. A full and prompt attendance is desired.

—The many friends of Colonel Miller, now of Jersey City, will be saddened to learn of the death of his estimable wife which occurred the later part of last week.

—The Ripon Commonwealth closes its words of praise for the Arlington minstrels, who appeared there about a week ago, by saying—"It is a first class minstrel company."

—The funeral services of the late T. H. Selwick were held yesterday afternoon at the First Methodist church, and were very largely attended. Rev. Mr. Holmes officiated and the services were of an appropriate and tender nature.

—The Beloit Masons have invited the Janesville members of the fraternity to join in a banquet there on Wednesday evening. A goodly number from here expect to attend, and a special train will take them there and back on that evening, leaving here about 7 o'clock.

—Plenty of entertainments this week. Rev. F. P. Woodbury will give his illustrated lecture on Rome to-morrow evening at the Congregational church; Fay Templeton's Olivette company will be at the Opera house Thursday evening; Ben Cotton and family will appear Friday and Saturday evenings, and in a Saturday afternoon matinee.

—Two rough looking fellows with a cigar box of silver polish and an old spoon were canvassing the city Saturday night as vagrants. One of them claimed to be Jesse James, but was finally content to be known by the less sensational name of Williams. This morning he and his companion were released on condition that they would leave town.

—"Olivette" has proved almost as general a craze as "Pinotero," and there has been so much interest excited here that there will be a crowded house to greet Fay Templeton's opera company next Thursday evening. The readiness with which tickets are selling is an indication that the public is anxious to hear it as rendered by this excellent company.

Those who desire choice seats should not delay in making their selections at Prentice & Evenson's.

—Chief Engineer Young is expecting daily the arrival of Salsby's engineer, Mr. Teller, who will inspect the west side fire engine, and give his opinion on its condition and wants, before any further action is taken in the matter. It will then be determined whether a new boiler is needed or not. It is probable that if repairs are decided upon, which will lay the engine out of service for any length of time, a new engine will be provided from Chicago, as a substitute in case of fire.

—We are in receipt of some wonderful snow views, taken by Elmer & Tonney, of Winona, Minn., during the terrible blockades of last winter. The views are most excellent, and by them one is enabled to see over and over again the wonderful sights such as will probably not be presented again in many seasons. These views are most interesting, and are meeting with rapid and large sales. Those who cannot find them at the regular dealers can send direct to Elmer & Tonney, 18 Center street, Winona, Minn., the price being twenty-five cents each, or $2.50 per dozen.

—Forbes' dramatic company is remarkable for one thing. It never has a poor house. When Ben Cotton and family, who are the leading attractions, appeared here before, the Opera house was crowded, and the audience was so well pleased, that many will go again, while those who missed the treat then, have heard so many flattering reports of the entertainments, that they will take good care not to miss them this time. On Friday evening the comedy drama, "True Devotion," will be given. Saturday evening the great sensational drama "Black Diamonds" will be produced. On Saturday afternoon the ideal reception matinee will be given. The prices are clear down, where everybody can take hold of them.

—The Misses Slaver have now opened their dress-making establishment in Williams' block, opposite the Myers house, on East Milwaukee street, and are prepared to welcome their friends and patrons. These ladies are already known by some of the ladies of Janesville, who have had occasion to employ them in the past, and their wonderful skill in cutting and fitting, and their taste in arranging will cause them to become speedily known to many others. They are more than ordinary dress-makers, and those who patronize them may be assured of having their work done in the latest style and best manner, they being really artists in that line. Their establishment is one which is an honor to Janesville, and deserving of a liberal support.

—Tom Graham has struck a new method of getting rid of pretty but persistent book-agers. While he was out doing some marketing this morning, one of these fair canvassers took possession of the hotel office and bar, prepared to tackle him on his return. As he entered the door in company with a couple of friends, she began to open her package, but Tom was quick enough to open his mouth before she could open her package. He assumed the air of a customer, instead of proprietor of the hotel, and shot the query at her—"I say, madam, have you got any fresh beer? If you have give us three glasses." The canvasser was completely taken aback at being taken for a barmaid, and she hurried out without stopping to explain her mission in life, further than to indignantly deny that she belonged around there.

BELOIT'S DAM.
Further Details Concerning the Washout and the Damage Done by the Water.

The break in the dam at Beloit, an account of which was given in Saturday's Gazette, proves to be fully as serious as was at first reported. The break came Friday night about 9 o'clock without a moment's warning, eighty feet in the center of the dam giving suddenly away, and the escaping torrent of water quickly raising the river below about two feet and a half, and speedily flooding the newspaper offices and other places. The bridge was for a time threatened with destruction, many heavy timbers coming down and striking against the pier, and piling, but fortunately no damage was done, and the debris lodged there was during Saturday removed so that it could not further endanger the structure.

O. E. Merrill & Co.'s machine shop is still running by water power. The Merrill & Houston iron works depend mostly on steam power. The other concerns depending on water power are shut down.

The water in the pond above the dam has lowered five feet by the break. Below the dam the water fell Saturday from the high mark caused by the sudden rise at the time of the break, to a point about as it stood before the break.

The Free Press had about eighteen inches of water on its floor, but little damage was done as the employees were on hand to get everything out of the way. The Outlook office also suffered a soaking.

It is thought that it will take about three weeks to repair the dam so that the paper mills can run. Work will be commenced at once.

The break was not in the new part of the dam, but from the new part on the west side, a distance of eighty feet, to near the east end, that being the old portion.

Get Out Doors!
The close confinement of all factory work gives the operatives pallid faces, poor appetites, languid miserable feelings, poor blood, inactive liver, kidney and urinary troubles, and all the physicians and medicine in the world cannot help them unless they get out of doors or use Hop Bitters, the purest and best remedy, especially for such cases, having abundance of health, sunshine and rosy cheeks in them. They cost but a trifle. See another column.

KEEP COOL.
The rumor that small pox had broken out in the city found swift wings last night and to-day, and like rumors of that nature was exaggerated as it sped from lip to lip. The simple facts in the matter are these. About two weeks ago a man by the name of Mallory and family came to this city from Chicago, and proceeded to occupy a little house on River street nearly opposite Buol's brewery. Last week he began to feel poorly, and a physician was called in. His case was closely watched, and yesterday the suspicious seemed confirmed that he had the small-pox, to which he had been exposed in Chicago. The case being thus early taken in hand and every known precaution being used to prevent exposure of others, or any spread of the disease, there is scarcely more danger than if the man was ill in Chicago. The premises have even at this early stage of the case been put in condition to prevent any exposure to others, and the locality, and the care exercised give every reason to believe that it will end simply where it began. The public need feel no anxiety, and pay no attention to flying rumors, as the Gazette will in this as on previous occasions give all needed and reliable information, and in case of any change the public will be duly notified.

It has been about two years since Janesville had a case of small-pox. That case was in a more crowded locality, and was not looked after so closely on the start, but by the management of our local physicians, the disease did not spread. That the same success will attend the management of this case there is every assurance.

If the scare which many have indulged in on hearing the rumors about, only results in more of our residents being promptly vaccinated, good will be accomplished. The precaution of vaccination, is not needed now more than any other time. It is a precaution which ought always to be taken, and those who have not taken it, should not delay a visit to their family physician.

Almost Young Again.
"My mother was afflicted a long time with Neuralgia and a dull, heavy, inactive condition of the whole system, headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physician or medicine did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters, with such good effect that she seems and feels young again, although over 70 years old. We think there is no other medicine fit to use in the family."—A lady in Providence, R. I.

THE WEATHER.
REPORTED BY PRENTICE & EVENSON, DRUGGISTS.
The thermometer at 6 o'clock last night stood at 41 degrees above; at 1 o'clock A. M. to-day, at 48 degrees above; at 7 o'clock A. M. at 49 degrees above; and at 1 o'clock P. M. at 52 degrees above. Cloudy.

The indications to-day are, partly cloudy weather, followed by threatening weather and rain, slightly warmer east to south winds, and falling barometer.

Years of Suffering.
Mrs. Barnhart, cor. Pratt and Broadway, Buffalo, was for twelve years a sufferer from rheumatism, and after trying every known remedy without avail, was cured by THOMAS' ELECTRIC OIL. Sold by A. J. Roberts and Sherer & Co.

THE BEAUTY AND COLOR OF THE HAIR may be safely regained by using Parker's Hair Dressing, which is much admired for its perfume, cleanliness and dandruff eradicating properties.

THE LAST SERMON.
The Congregational church was literally packed last evening, every seat being taken, and chairs being placed in the aisles and in other places usually left vacant. Even with these increased facilities for seating, there were many who only came to the door, and seeing the crowded condition of the house, left, while others stood about the entrance, throughout the service. The occasion for this jam was the fact that Rev. Mr. Sawin was to preach his farewell sermon. The audience was made up of representatives of all churches, and all classes of our citizens. The Baptist congregation was present almost in its entirety, as Dr. Hodge gave up his evening service. An acknowledgment of a similar courtesy extended to him by the Congregationalists when he preached his farewell sermon at the close of his first pastorate in this city.

The pulpit and rostrum were very pleasingly decorated with vines, foliage plants, and cut flowers. The choir had prepared special music which they rendered well. The discourse was based on the text—"Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, comfort your hearts, and establish you in every good word and work." The church was urged to hopefulness, and this was the leading thought, around which clustered some allusions to the work of the past and the prospects for the future.

Rev. Dr. Hodge offered the closing prayer, and a verse of "Nearer, My God to Thee," was sung, followed by the benediction pronounced by the pastor, which was the closing act of a six years pastorate.

A TRUE TEACHER GONE.
Mrs. Louisa Peterson, widow of Jacob R. Peterson, died at her home on East Milwaukee street, in this city, yesterday morning about 7 o'clock. The sad event was not altogether without warning, but it came more quickly than was expected. For several weeks past she has been very feeble, and suffering from a nervous prostration, caused by the reaction from the strain to which her strength and feelings had been subjected by the prolonged and fatal illness of her son, added to the growing infirmities of an age ripened in hard work. She had reached the age of eighty-one years, and her life has been one of wonderful activity.

Ever since she came to this city thirty odd years ago, she has in addition to home duties taught much of the time, continuing her select school until a short time ago. She was a very intelligent woman, and had a happy faculty of imparting information to young minds and inspiring them to an earnest search for knowledge. Many here who are now in the midst of life's activities, are numbered among those who in earlier years have been under her instruction, and bear tribute to the helpfulness of the impressions made by her upon their youthful minds.

Teaching thus until she had passed her four score years, she has imparted knowledge to representatives of three distinct generations, those being among her last pupils, some whose grandparents were under her instruction in her earlier years, and she has taught many whose parents have attended her school. Such a record is a remarkable one. The same faithfulness which made her so valuable as an instructor, marked her devotion to her other duties, and to the cares of home and family. For years she has held the respect and esteem of many in this city, and deep sorrow will be felt that she should even now be called away, though she enters upon a higher school, where she will receive instruction from a perfect master.

The daughter, Miss M. Louise Peterson, the assistant postmaster, is now the only remaining member of the family circle. Upon her sorrow has fallen with a deep gloom, her portion being thus a double one in the loss of a brother, followed so speedily by the loss of a mother. To her the most tender sympathy of all is extended.

The funeral services are to be held at 10:30 o'clock to-morrow forenoon at the Congregational church.

PERSONAL.
—J. E. Addy spent Sunday in this city and started off again to-day to sell more music! goods.

—T. A. Sayles lies very ill at his home on Franklin street, and it is not thought he can live but a few hours longer at the best.

—Miss L. P. Rice, who is attending the Normal school at Englewood, is in the city to attend the wedding of her brother, Homer E. Rice to Miss Ella Cutting, which happy event occurs to-morrow evening. Miss Emily Rice, another sister, who teaches in the same institution, is expected to-morrow.

—The many friends and acquaintances of B. Atwater, who for a time bought to locate here, will be interested in reading the following from the Intelligencer, of Lancaster, Pa.: "Lancaster has in Mr. B. Atwater a new packer of our Lancaster county leaf, it's being his first season with us. He has been making a transfer of a part of his packing to Messrs. Shroder & Bon, of New York city, and sent them to-day over the Pennsylvania railroad, twenty-one cars loaded with leaf, this being the largest shipment of this season of any one packer."

—"Hiram" in the Chicago Voice of Masourey, in writing of the September meeting of the Wisconsin Grand Commandery at Oshkosh, says of Dr. C. L. Lotz Martin, our well known citizen: "We noticed upon the floor of the Grand Commandery quite a number of knights of advanced years. Conspicuous among them was Sir Martin, in his 78th year. He is a resident of Janesville, and widely known for his earnestness and peculiarities. He attends the meetings of all the grand bodies of the State, and is not for his reticence. It is a pleasure to meet these veterans."
